I carefully read the St. Pete Times coverage behind all this. It's the best example I've ever seen of the famous Peter Principle, people who advanced too high and reached their "level of incompetence." Ambition exceeded contribution. So their grand-standing was discovered and they were fired.

They're now nasty and rancorous that someone called their bluff and tossed them out. After some admit to criminal assault, now all come forward in unison to accuse others of it? Who's choreographing this minuet?

BTW, not once did St. Pete Times present one scrap of hard, physical, tangible evidence. Even Gil Grissom and Horatio Caine would come up dry! - M.B.
